Marta was born and until last year lived and studied in St Petersburg, where she studied singing and the piano from the age of four. Marta's first solo performances were participation in the anniversary concert of "7 Happy Notes" choir in St Petersburg, charitable concerts of the Konstantin Khabensky Foundation in Lucerne (Switzerland) and the Vladimir Spivakov International Charitable Foundation in Moscow in 2019.

Since this school year, Marta lives in Moscow and has been studying at the music school at the Gnesins Russian Music Academy in the piano class. During the year, Marta took part in several music contests, including the annual Without Borders International Charity Festival White Cane organized by the Diana Gurtskaya Foundation, where Marta performed "Aria of Troubadour" along with the famous Russian baritone Yevgeny Kungurov.

Besides music and singing, Marta is very fond of swimming, skiing and reading English detective stories. Marta's dream is to speak at least five languages and become a professional musician, although Martha has not yet decided whether to be a professional piano player or an opera singer.
