

Chen Yilin was admitted to the middle school attached to Shanghai Conservatory of music in 2013, majoring in Chinese percussion. She studied Chinese percussion with associate professor Luo Tianqi and Western Percussion with teacher Gao Hua.

She once served as the percussion chief of the National Orchestra in the middle school affiliated to Shanghai Conservatory of music.

In 2020, she was admitted to Shanghai Conservatory of music and majored in Chinese percussion. Associate Professor Luo Tianqi studied Chinese percussion, and teacher Wang Yuyan studied Western Percussion.

In 2017, she won the second place in Chinese percussion in the professional youth group of the second IPEA International Percussion competition.

In 2019, she won the CCTV China instrumental music TV competition and the championship of the finals of the non-traditional combination group.

And won the second place in the finals of the solo professional juvenile percussion group of CCTV China instrumental music TV competition.

In 2021, she won the second prize of the world national percussion professional youth group and the third prize of the malimba professional youth group in the Canadian International Music Competition.

In 2021, she won the second prize of the professional youth group of Beijing Drum Festival.

In 2022, she won the second prize of Western Percussion Group E and the third prize of world national Percussion Group E in the Russian International Music Competition.